Investment environment

The market started to price in a recession in response to signs that the hitherto ravenous appetite of the US consumer may finally be satiated. Here, household savings that were put aside during the Covid pandemic are being exhausted, and the sense of economic uncertainty has crept into spending decisions. Moreover, the Chinese economic reopening may not be as robust as hoped, prompting calls for the Chinese authorities to implement further stimulus measures. Support for the Chinese property market is likely the most potent prescription for economic stagnation, but this conflicts with President Xi's philosophy that "housing should be for living in, not speculation". Investors are left struggling to form a cohesive view of what comes next in China. Meanwhile, we saw another wave of excitement around artificial intelligence (AI), as Nvidia provided very strong second quarter revenue estimates thanks to demand for its leading AI-compatible chips.

In addition, investors are still trying to make their mind up on the timing and depth of any forthcoming recession. Consequently, market leadership has continued to narrow with a handful of stocks accounting for the majority of the index's year-to-date performance, as market participants seemed to seek safety. June perhaps hinted at the pitfalls of such a strategy. A number of cyclical stocks, especially in the chemicals sector, issued profit warnings, largely as a result of de-stocking. While the concern is that end demand is the bigger issue, a number of the stocks concerned have in fact responded with positive share price reactions. There are signs, therefore, that the market is attempting to anticipate inflection points in selected cyclicals.

Another important factor in June was falling headline inflation but stickier core inflation, where eurozone Consumer Price Inflation (CPI) was at 5.5% year-over-year versus core CPI of 5.4% year-over-year. Regular readers of these commentaries will be familiar with our view that inflation should prove sticky, owing to entrenched labour expectations (causing higher salary increase demands) as well as the inflationary pressures from supply chains being nearshored over the medium term. This underpins an interest rate regime that looks very different to the last decade - one where borrowing money has a cost associated to it. We continue to believe that this new paradigm favours our flexible, valuation-conscious investment style.

Portfolio review

US 'big tech' is back in vogue and we have been seeing very narrow market leadership. However, some of the investor appetite for AI has trickled down to Europe. Here, beneficiaries included capital goods businesses that form the supply chain, such as semiconductor manufacturing equipment firms (ASML, ASM and BESI), along with Siemens and Schneider - both of which have large datacentre hardware/software businesses. Atlas Copco, which supplies vacuum pump technology and had reported weak first quarter orders, has also done well as investors considered that its share price had reached a trough. We also had good returns from Adidas, Hugo Boss, Saint Gobain and CRH. The first two continued to be rewarded by the market for their brand turnaround strategies. The latter two were helped by improved sentiment towards construction material companies.

The biggest detractors were UPM-Kymmene and ABInbev. UPM-Kymmene's business has been hurt by lower pulp prices and elevated inventories, aggravating inventory destocking. We consider this to be temporary. AB InBev suffered a backlash to its US beer brand, Bud Light, from the conservative-leaning portion of its customer base in response to a single sponsored post from a social media influencer. This episode could reshape consumer marketing strategies across corporate America. For AB InBev specifically, the share price fall appears to more than price in a permanent impairment to the brand, which may or may not turn out to be the case. But, with AB InBev being a highly diversified, highly profitable global beer behemoth - for which Bud Light accounts for only 7-8% of group sales - we think this should prove to be a blip.

Janus Henderson Continental European Fund

We sold the position in BP and trimmed the rest of the fund's energy sector exposure due to poor price action following the announcement of another OPEC+ supply cut. We are waiting for confirmation of our medium-term thesis of stronger-for-longer oil prices before taking the fund's allocation back up. We used the capital liberated to switch into what we see as oversold, high-conviction ideas where we think valuations look attractive. Elsewhere, we increased the fund's position in Danone as we see tangible evidence of the new CEO's strategy working.

Investment into the fund will acquire units/shares of the fund itself and not the underlying assets owned by the fund.

Note that any differences among portfolio securities currencies, share class currencies and costs to be paid or represented in currencies other than your home currency will expose you to currency risk. Costs and returns may increase or decrease as a result of currency and exchange rate fluctuations.

Fund charges will impact the value of your investment. In particular, the ongoing charges applicable to each fund will dilute investment performance, particularly over time. For further explanation of charges please visit our Fund Charges page at <http://www.janushenderson.com>.

Janus Henderson Continental European Fund

What are the risks specific to this fund?

- When the Fund, or a share/unit class, seeks to mitigate exchange rate movements of a currency relative to the base currency (hedge), the hedging strategy itself may positively or negatively impact the value of the Fund due to differences in short-term interest rates between the currencies.
- The Fund could lose money if a counterparty with which the Fund trades becomes unwilling or unable to meet its obligations, or as a result of failure or delay in operational processes or the failure of a third party provider.
- Shares/Units can lose value rapidly, and typically involve higher risks than bonds or money market instruments. The value of your investment may fall as a result.
- Shares of small and mid-size companies can be more volatile than shares of larger companies, and at times it may be difficult to value or to sell shares at desired times and prices, increasing the risk of losses.
- If a Fund has a high exposure to a particular country or geographical region it carries a higher level of risk than a Fund which is more broadly diversified.
- This Fund may have a particularly concentrated portfolio relative to its investment universe or other funds in its sector. An adverse event impacting even a small number of holdings could create significant volatility or losses for the Fund.
- The Fund may use derivatives with the aim of reducing risk or managing the portfolio more efficiently. However this introduces other risks, in particular, that a derivative counterparty may not meet its contractual obligations.
- If the Fund holds assets in currencies other than the base currency of the Fund, or you invest in a share/unit class of a different currency to the Fund (unless hedged, i.e. mitigated by taking an offsetting position in a related security), the value of your investment may be impacted by changes in exchange rates.
- Securities within the Fund could become hard to value or to sell at a desired time and price, especially in extreme market conditions when asset prices may be falling, increasing the risk of investment losses.

General risks

- Past performance does not predict future returns.
- The value of an investment and the income from it can fall as well as rise and you may not get back the amount originally invested.
- Tax assumptions and reliefs depend upon an investor's particular circumstances and may be subject to change.

Investment policy

The Fund invests at least two-thirds of its assets in a concentrated portfolio of shares (equities) and equity-related securities of companies, of any size, in any industry, in Continental Europe. Companies will have their registered office in or do most of their business (directly or through subsidiaries) in this region.

The Fund may also invest in other assets including cash and money market instruments.

The investment manager may use derivatives (complex financial instruments) to reduce risk or to manage the Fund more efficiently.

The Fund is actively managed with reference to the MSCI Europe (ex UK) Index, which is broadly representative of the companies in which it may invest, as this can provide a useful comparator for assessing the Fund's performance. The investment manager has discretion to choose investments for the Fund with weightings different to the index or not in the index. Depending on prevailing market conditions the Fund's portfolio may shift between 'high conviction' (whereby the manager will take significant risk relative to the index) and a more cautious stance. This means the performance of the Fund may at times differ significantly from the index, while at other times it may be more closely aligned.
