

EMERGING MARKETS FUND

At a glance

Performance*

The Fund returned 5.11%, the Index returned 5.16% and the Sector returned 4.68%.

Contributors/detractors

Stock selection contributed to relative performance across most market sectors, especially consumer staples. Stock selection in the consumer discretionary sector detracted, however.

Outlook

We continue to seek longer-term trends that we believe are creating attractive opportunities for emerging market companies.

Investment environment

- Global equities rallied in February, boosted by signs of continued economic resilience in the US and upbeat corporate earnings reports. Positive investor sentiment also aided the performance of emerging market stocks, which generally delivered positive returns for the month.
- Stocks in China and Hong Kong outperformed the MSCI Emerging Markets Index, as investors shook off some of the economic concerns that have pressured shares in recent months. Stocks in Egypt and South Africa underperformed with negative returns.
- Most sectors of the index delivered positive results for the month. The consumer discretionary sector had the strongest performance, while materials stocks lagged the broader market.

Portfolio review

The fund's relative performance benefited from a new position in Mexican discount retailer BBB Foods, as its shares rallied following the company's initial public offering (IPO) earlier in the month. We invested in BBB Foods because we believe it is a best-in-class operator with a track record of impressive same-store sales growth and store expansion.

BBB Foods currently owns about 2000 stores but hopes to expand this to over 10,000 locations. We also see potential around its efforts to introduce its proven low-cost, professional retailing model into a less formalised segment of the retail sector. The management team behind BBB Foods has demonstrated operational excellence across its key areas of focus, and we are excited to be an early investor in the company.

Nu Holdings, another positive contributor, is a digital bank that caters to over 30 million customers across Latin America. The company has become one of Latin America's premier financial brands through its client-friendly and differentiated product set. We have been impressed with its ability to add new customers and sell additional products to its existing clients while also delivering increased profitability. Additionally, the bank has earned very high returns on investment in its core market of Brazil, where over half of the adult population are customers. We see potential as the company looks to replicate these trends in Mexico and other Latin American markets. We continue to see Nu Holdings as one of the most attractive business models in emerging markets.

Mexican spirits distiller Becele was another positive contributor, as the stock made a strong recovery after ending 2023 on a weak note. The late 2023 underperformance followed the company's disappointing third-quarter earnings release. In particular, higher prices for agave - a key tequila ingredient - pressured Becele's profit margins.

However, Becele recently released a full-year report that eased some investor concerns about its near-term outlook. Becele's management team also expressed confidence that agave prices may decline going forward, potentially alleviating margin pressures. We remain invested in Becele due to its brand strength and the long-term growth potential we see for the overall tequila market. We are also constructive on its energy drink business in another market segment where we see attractive long-term potential.

While HDFC Bank was a relative detractor, the India-based financial services company remains one of our favourite bank investments, located in one of our most favoured countries. We continue to see opportunity around India's strong macroeconomic fundamentals, and in our view HDFC is well positioned to benefit from these fundamentals as one of the country's highest-quality banks.

In particular, we believe HDFC is poised to grow loans, cross-sell products, and improve margins. Despite these attributes, HDFC has faced uncertainty due to India's tighter monetary policy conditions. This has led to higher interest rates, which have raised HDFC's funding costs and limited its ability to maintain its high historic pace of loan growth. Despite this near-term uncertainty, we continue to see potential for the company due to its market leadership in a relatively underpenetrated end market. Once the market has time to digest more moderate rates of loan growth, we believe investors may refocus on the company's long-term fundamentals.

Another detractor was One 97 Communications, an Indian digital payments company that has shown impressive penetration rates and innovation over the last few years. However, the company's banking arm has come under increased regulatory scrutiny, and it was ordered to stop taking additional customer deposits. This regulatory decision has materially compromised the company's ability to capitalise on network effects across its platform. It also raised our concerns about the company's governance, controls, and oversight processes. As a result, we sold our position in the stock.

Manager outlook

We are cautiously optimistic about the outlook for global economic growth even as we recognise uncertainty around central bank policies, which could affect the cost of capital in emerging markets. We are closely monitoring macroeconomic and policy developments in China, which could have broader implications for the global economy. We see risks attached to an increasingly complex geopolitical environment, as potential conflicts, legislative changes, or electoral results could have reverberations for global economic growth, inflation, and trade policy.

Despite these sources of uncertainty, we remain optimistic about the outlook for emerging markets relative to developed economies, where economic growth remains relatively slow, policy rates relatively elevated, and valuations for many stocks near historic highs. By contrast, most emerging markets have generally seen more accommodative monetary policy and improving economic trends, at least outside of China.

We are also seeing exciting innovations in emerging markets as visionary companies have worked to improve economic efficiencies, expand access to health care, and address the global climate crisis through electrification and green energy initiatives.

We are excited about pro-market reforms in several markets. India stands out due to its demographics, corporate governance, and transparency. We have been encouraged by the country's recent infrastructure investments and by changes to the bankruptcy code that may increase economic productivity. As we look to take advantage of such opportunities, we continue to pay close attention to company and country fundamentals and corporate governance. We believe this strategy could lead to favourable long-term outcomes.

Investment policy

The Fund invests at least two-thirds of its assets in shares (equities) and equity-related securities of companies, of any size, in any industry, in emerging markets. Companies will have their registered office in or do most of their business (directly or through subsidiaries) in emerging markets. 'Emerging markets' may be countries in the MSCI Emerging Markets Index, those included in the World Bank definition of developing (low and lower middle income) economies, or which are, in the Investment Manager's opinion, developing. The Fund may invest in companies of any size, including smaller capitalisation companies, in any industry. The Fund may also invest in other assets including companies outside emerging markets, cash and money market instruments. The Investment Manager may use derivatives (complex financial instruments) to reduce risk or to manage the Fund more efficiently. The Fund is actively managed with reference to the MSCI Emerging Markets Index, which is broadly representative of the companies in which it may invest, as this forms the basis of the Fund's performance target. The Investment Manager has discretion to choose investments for the Fund with weightings different to the index or not in the index, but at times the Fund may hold investments similar to the index.

Investment strategy

The Investment Manager seeks consistent risk-adjusted returns by looking to identify the most attractive opportunities within countries across various stages of economic and political development. This diverse landscape requires the Investment Manager to utilise an array of perspectives to fully evaluate these opportunities. By combining fundamental company research, market and economic analysis, a keen focus on governance and quantitative input, the portfolio attempts to capture price inefficiencies across companies of all sizes.

Fund specific risks

The Fund could lose money if a counterparty with which the Fund trades becomes unwilling or unable to meet its obligations, or as a result of failure or delay in operational processes or the failure of a third party provider. Shares/Units can lose value rapidly, and typically involve higher risks than bonds or money market instruments. The value of your investment may fall as a result. Shares of small and mid-size companies can be more volatile than shares of larger companies, and at times it may be difficult to value or to sell shares at desired times and prices, increasing the risk of losses. Emerging markets expose the Fund to higher volatility and greater risk of loss than developed markets; they are susceptible to adverse political and economic events, and may be less well regulated with less robust custody and settlement procedures. This Fund may have a particularly concentrated portfolio relative to its investment universe or other funds in its sector. An adverse event impacting even a small number of holdings could create significant volatility or losses for the Fund. The Fund may use derivatives to help achieve its investment objective. This can result in leverage (higher levels of debt), which can magnify an investment outcome. Gains or losses to the Fund may therefore be greater than the cost of the derivative. Derivatives also introduce other risks, in particular, that a derivative counterparty may not meet its contractual obligations. If the Fund holds assets in currencies other than the base currency of the Fund, or you invest in a share/unit class of a different currency to the Fund (unless hedged, i.e. mitigated by taking an offsetting position in a related security), the value of your investment may be impacted by changes in exchange rates. Securities within the Fund could become hard to value or to sell at a desired time and price, especially in extreme market conditions when asset prices may be falling, increasing the risk of investment losses. The Fund may incur a higher level of transaction costs as a result of investing in less actively traded or less developed markets compared to a fund that invests in more active/developed markets.
